

Stehlen Price Competitiveness Review

Oct 9, 2026 · @Ricky Yau

Google has competitor price data for only 47 of our 1,748 products, mostly CURT hitches, car grilles and headlights. Hitches are mostly 10–70% below market; car grilles and three headlight models are 18–79% above it, and matching those prices would cut our margin to near zero or below. A second pass compared every in-stock product with similar products from other sellers: of 1,010 products, 680 are below the typical market price, 224 at it and 106 above, so most of our catalog has room to hold or raise prices.

Why the price gap matters

On Google Shopping our listing appears next to other sellers' prices, so price is the first thing a shopper compares.

- Priced above market: fewer clicks and fewer sales, because shoppers pick the cheaper listing beside ours. Google says the benchmark is the price that typically wins more ad auctions, so an overpriced product also tends to be shown less in ads and in unpaid Shopping results. Every paid click on an overpriced product is less likely to turn into an order, which raises our cost per sale.
- Priced far below market: we win the sale but leave margin on the table, and cheap, popular items sell out fast. Ten of the cheapest hitches below are already at 0 units, so we can't sell them at any price until they're restocked.
- Near market (within about 10%): the sweet spot. We stay competitive in the side-by-side comparison and keep our normal ~30–35% margin.

Priced above market (15 products)

Three headlight models are 34–79% above market; matching would take our margin to between -20% and 12%. Car grilles are 18–44% above market, and matching would leave 2–22% margin. Products under $100 (most car grilles) and out-of-stock items are already excluded from paid ads.

Decisions for Joe and Ricky

The biggest win is restocking the cheap, out-of-stock hitches; price changes on the rest are small but quick.

- ☐ Restock CURT hitches first. Ten listed hitches are 15–70% below market with 0 units; each sale would still earn our normal ~33% margin. Confirm with the warehouse which can be reordered.
- ☐ Raise prices on the four well-stocked bargains, staying under market: Tundra crystal headlights $194 → ~$210 (77 units), F-150 sequential headlights $200 → ~$280 (40), 2009–2012 Ram 1500 grille $155 → ~$180 (24), Volvo XC90 hitch $180 → ~$215 (7). Each stays at least 10% under the market price.
- ☐ Do not cut headlight prices to match. The C/K, F-150 amber and Tundra halo headlights would sell at or near a loss. First check whether Google is comparing them to a cheaper, different product; if it is a true match, decide whether to keep selling them.
- ☐ Car grilles under $100: matching would leave 2–22% margin. Keep current prices (they are already out of paid ads) or clear the stock with a sale.
- ☐ Shipping wording: the site says free shipping to the lower 48 states, but our Google shipping policy offers $0 to all US addresses, including Alaska and Hawaii. Pick one so Google doesn't flag a mismatch.
- ☐ Raise prices on the 20 products below that undercut even the cheapest competitor (full-family research, next section), led by the Tacoma and Silverado full-LED headlights (341 units combined).
- ☐ Walmart channel conflict: our Stehlen Razor 3000 chase rack shows on Walmart at $233.90 vs $444 on stehlenauto.com. Confirm who the Walmart seller is and align the prices.
- ☐ Title fix: the 1998–2007 Honda Accord hitch is titled "Draw-Tite 11290", but our research found 11290 listed as a CURT part number. Please check the brand on the product.

All in-stock products vs similar products

Across all 1,141 in-stock products, we priced 1,010 against similar products from other sellers (same vehicle and fit). 680 are below the typical market price, 224 are at it and 106 are above. We are a value brand: most categories sit 18–42% under the typical price, while hard tri-fold covers sit at market (+3%).

Products were grouped into 173 families by type, style and vehicle size; we researched the best-seller in each and applied its result to the whole family. The other 131 products are covered by Google's own benchmark above.

Check these before cutting prices: several comparables are a simpler or budget version (for example, halogen instead of full LED, or a basket instead of a full rack). The chase rack's "market" includes our own Stehlen listing on Walmart at $233.90, so that row is mainly a channel price conflict.

The full list (181 researched products, every comparable with price and link, and which family each in-stock product belongs to) is in the attached spreadsheet, Stehlen-Similar-Product-Price-Research-2026-10-09.xlsx. About 70% of the comparable prices come from search and Google Shopping results rather than opened product pages, so treat single rows as directional and confirm before changing a price.

How to read Google's benchmark

Google's "market price" is Google's estimate of the average price for what it judges to be the same product, the price that typically wins more ad auctions. It is reliable for products with a manufacturer part number such as CURT hitches, and weaker for our own-brand headlights and grilles, where Google may be matching a similar but different product. It covers only 47 of our 1,748 products (none of our own-brand tonneau covers, bed mats or bull guards), so treat it as a spot check, not a full price audit. Margins use real CB cost plus estimated shipping.
